

Introducing Assistant Master

Susan Ericsson

Susan Ericsson is the Assistant Master of CCS, and has been at Northwestern for four years where she has been pursuing scholarship on contemporary US cinema and international art films. Currently Susan is working on her dissertation and advises the campus radio station. Next year she'll be teaching a course on social documentaries.

Susan is originally from Long Island, New York and has also lived in Massachusetts and New Jersey. In Chicago, Susan lives close to the lake and enjoys walking along the shore. She likes long conversations over lunch, canoeing, watching movies (no surprise here), trying new cuisines, taking photos, and lounging around in the sun. Susan often joins in on fun CCS activities, like Field Day and dinner outings in Chicago. Prior to entering grad school, Susan worked as a video producer and editor and attended Cornell University as an undergraduate.

One of Susan's favorite things about CCS is what a wonderful sense of community we have. She is pleased to see how we alter our events and traditions to suit each year's new group of students and looks forward to getting acquainted with our new residents next year. One of her most memorable moments was going to the Latino Film Festival with CCS a few years ago and dining at the Barcelona Tapas restaurant in downtown Evanston afterwards. She is one of the most cheerful, friendly, and helpful people we know, and at CCS we feel incredibly lucky to have her as our Assistant Master! ☺
